Breast cancers in women with a harmful BRCA1 mutation tend to be "triple-negative cancers" (that is, the breast cancer cells do not have estrogen receptors, progesterone receptors, or large amounts of HER2/neu protein), which generally have poorer prognosis than other breast cancers.

How cancer starts Cancer Research UK

This is a mutation. It means that a gene has been damaged or lost or copied twice. Mutations can happen by chance when a cell is dividing. Some mutations mean that the cell no longer understands its instructions and starts to grow out of control. There have to be about half a dozen different mutations before a normal cell turns into a cancer cell.

The Genetics of Cancer Cancer Net

A single mutation will likely not cause cancer. Usually, cancer occurs from multiple mutations over a lifetime. That is why cancer occurs more often in older people. They have had more opportunities for mutations to build up.

Driver and Passenger Mutation in Cancer Serious Science

So that means that cells are sitting and waiting for the next mutation, and now we're talking about cancer, so cancer cells are sitting waiting for the next mutation to happen. When this mutation happens in one of the cells, the cell will take over the population and will form sort of a new layer of cancer, if you wish.

How cancer shapes evolution and PubMed Central PMC

So just as evolution of species is driven by mutation and selection, cancer evolution is also driven by both oncogenic mutations and alterations in selective pressures, both of which can result from aging and carcinogenic exposures.

Mutation and cancer An Introduction to Genetic Analysis

Cancer has many causes, but ultimately all these causes exert their effects on a special class of genes called cancer genes or proto-oncogenes. Many of these proto-oncogenes have now been identified and mapped, as shown in Figure 15-26 .

Changes in genes American Cancer Society

That is in part because although the person has a mutation in one copy of the gene, he or she needs to acquire at least one more mutation for the gene to stop working completely and cancer to occur. Since not everyone gets the second mutation, not everyone gets cancer. Incomplete penetrance can also be because even if the mutation makes it so that a gene doesn't function, other factors may be needed for the cancer to start.
